DESCRIPTION:	Twenty-five to 68 civilians killed, most of them women and children, after Coalition Forces (CF) struck residential areas following a major assault by ISIS in the town of Kaljibrin near Azaz, Aleppo Governorate, Syria. Reports from local sources and media provide a wide range of casualty estimates, sometimes including estimates of combatants (rebel and Islamic factions), and in at least one report implicating Russian airstrikes as well as ISIS and CF as responsible parties. The Syrian Network for Human Rights provided names for 28 casualties, 18 of which were identified as children. Airwars.org characterizes the quality of the reporting as "fair," noting that although ISIS reportedly had killed civilians in the town recently,
